

asked me to dinner in the middle of the day on Saturday, an invitation that I accepted. On Saturday morning Mr. Eger--

Q Well, now, what else did you do on Friday?

A Well, I have given you the morning, what I did around home and taking the Wilsons up; I have given you that, and Osbornville; so it must have been along early in the afternoon when I got back from Osbornville.

MR. STUDER: Did that washwoman see you where you took the wash?

MR. STEVENS: At Osbornville where I took the wash? Yes. That is about 8 miles from Lavalette 7 or 8 miles. I was fishing that afternoon and then in the evening I was over at the Egers. I do not remember fishing that Friday evening after supper.

BY MR. PALZER:

Q Well, now, is this the last time you took dinner at the Egers that season or did you take dinner there again?

A No, I had my dinner at home on Friday, but on Saturday noon I had dinner with the Egers and we had the bluefish that I had caught on Friday and which I had kept in my icebox over night and taken over Saturday morning. Saturday Mr. Eger didn't go to work in Philadelphia and the morning we spend in a rowboat out on Barnegat Bay with a cast net catching bait, small moss bunkers for bait. We spent
